A Like-New Refurbished Pod for Caravans Like No Other

The photos included in this file represent an example of the extensive damage typically found on the outer skins, floors, and side walls of pods in need of refurbishment; especially coming from those operating in harsh environments where the equipment is used and abuse. This particular pod had several “repairs” and patches hiding years of damage that was covered up and never addressed per the manual. Damage to this extent is not remedied long-term with a quick repair. This pod required a total refurbishment, not just according to the manufacture’s specs but also to Worthington MRO Center’s standards and quality workmanship.

During refurbishment, after cleaning up the damaged core and floor sections, Worthington removed the added weight accumulated by years of delamination that was addressed with heavy resin and liquid core splice fillers.

When completed, every pod comes out of Worthington stronger, lighter weight, and with a bright reflective interior making it easier to see throughout the pod. Operators have a choice on the interior color which can be painted white or grey. Standard exterior color choice is the same, however, Worthington also offers custom paint scheme as well, just another reason why Worthington MRO Center is your next stop shop for refurbished to like-new cargo pods for Caravans on a Mission.
